

FREE Deaf Community cultural competency training

Are you a medical or allied health professional? Do you work in hospitals? Perhaps you've encountered or treated deaf or hard of hearing patients or family members who use Auslan (Australian Sign Language)?

Were you satisfied with your communication access with the deaf/hard of hearing patient?

Do you think they received adequate and full access to communication?

Deaf Victoria is excited to announce an opportunity for public hospital staff to receive free Deaf Community cultural competency training as part of a pilot project. The newly created module has been specifically designed for those working in hospitals and is delivered by deaf presenters. The 1.5 hour session provides information on communication strategies, how to book Auslan Interpreters and your responsibilities as a medical professional when treating a deaf and hard of hearing patient.

To book in as a team or individual, please email info@deafvictoria.org.au
